

- Sophistication In Women -

Men Usually Marry Girls Who Have Never Enjoyed Admiration from Other Men, and Who Acquire a Taste for It After Marriage.

- By Dorothy Dix -

AS A general thing, the sophisticated woman appeals to a man as more enjoyable as a companion than desirable as a wife. The average man's ideal of woman is still Eve before she ate the apple, not the Eve who refrains from eating apples because the fruit is bad for their digestion. Therefore the average man marries a young girl during her first season in society, firmly convinced that because he is the first and only man who has ever made love to her he will be the last and only. This depends on circumstances. The girl may be sufficiently in love with him to never crave the admiration of any other man, or she may be so situated as to be cut off from it, and so safe, but the path to the divorce court is kept hot by wives who were married when they were mere children, and before they found out how intoxicating is the draught of flattery and admiration and love-making that man offers to woman's lips.

If a woman acquires a taste for this after marriage, God help her husband, for there is no cure for the married flirt. She may not be a bad woman, or an actually immoral one, but her craving for admiration is like the hunger for opium. It grows by what it feeds on, and there is no limit to the depth of imbecility into which it leads its victims. If you will trace back the stories of the infidelity of wives half of the time you will find that the woman was married when she was very young, before she had experienced the thrilling delight of listening to a man's vows of deathless devotion, or had known the subtle sense of power with which she can sway men by her beauty or her charm. Few husbands ever make love to their wives, and so it is the woman's natural desire for this courtship and seduction that she has missed that leads her into seeking it away from home and in forbidden paths.

For otherwise it is with the woman who has been a belle before her marriage. She has had her fill of admiration and seduction from men, and it possesses none of the charm of novelty to her. She has heard the verb of love conjugated in all its moods and tenses until it is as wearisome as a school exercise. She has played at the game of flirtation until it has palled upon her, and as a married woman she would no more think of finding amusement in carrying on a surreptitious love affair than a Paderewski would think of grinding out raktine from a barrel organ. Many Women Who Have Never Been In Society. Another mistake that men make is in thinking that the best way to assure themselves of getting a domestic wife is to marry a woman who has never been in society. Men marry to get a home far oftener than women do. The city man, at least, seldom commits matrimony until he is utterly weary of the deadly round of social gayeties. The mere thought of being dragged about in a wife's wake to balls and parties, and first nights fills him with such terror that he feels his only safety lies in marrying some woman who knows nothing of them.

When She Enjoys a Little Gayety. Never was a more fatal error. There is no other woman in the world who is so absolutely crazy for every form of amusement as the woman who has never known any gayety, and who all of her life has been starving for it. She is like the man dying of thirst, who is suddenly plunged into a river where he can steep himself to the lips. Perhaps she has never been to a ball before, and the intoxication of dancing becomes a frenzy with her that makes her mad to go to every party to which she is invited. Perhaps she has never been to a restaurant before, and the golden streets of the new Jerusalem do not appear so desirable to her eyes as to eat in a gilded public dining room.

Here, too, is the woman who has had who is the safe matrimonial chance for a man. The girl who has been in society all her life, who has been to parties and balls and theaters until they have lost all their charm of novelty, is glad enough to settle down to domesticity, and to find her pleasure inside of her home instead of without it. To the girl who knows her Europe as she does her native town, every excursion does not offer a temptation; having seen the best the stage affords, she does not yearn to see every silly play that is put on the boards; having wearied of balls and parties, she is glad to turn from them to the abiding pleasures of old books and old friends.

Pretty much the same rule will be found to apply to women and economy. Most men are afraid to marry a girl who has been raised rich, lest she be extravagant, and there is a theory that if a man want a saving and helpful wife he should marry a poor girl. Quite the reverse of this is generally true. To the girl who has never had any money at all to spend the $2000 or $3000 that her husband earns seems as unending as the wealth of a Rockefeller, and she is generally reckless in throwing it away, whereas to the girl who has been used to thousands instead of hundreds the husband's small income seems so little that she feels she must save every cent.

Fall to Learn Women Are Only Human. In the end the question of a choice between the girl who has had the things she desired and the girl who has never had them narrows itself down to the old one of human experience, and the reason that men make so many mistakes in deciding this important question is because they have never yet learned that a woman is a human being.

Look Before You Eat

Better still, look before you buy Big Can Baking Powders. Look beyond the big bulk. Consider the quality. Think of what the can contains—of what it must contain to be sold at so low a price.

Think of the uncertain leavening power. Think of the bake day failures. Think of the double quantities often required to leaven bakings.

And Remember

that when these Cheap Powders do raise foods they sometimes leave the bakings bleached and acid, or yellow and alkaline—you don't get the sweet, light and tender baking you should have.

And Don't Forget

that big can powders are cheap in price because they are cheap in quality, that they are often unreliable, they are made to sell, not to serve and satisfy—they are not economical, either to buy or use.

Then Memorize These Facts

Calumet Baking Powder prevents failure and waste; it is absolutely pure—and absolutely dependable.

Only the best of materials of tested strength are employed in the making of Calumet. These ingredients are so perfectly proportioned that all Calumet Baking come from the oven light, fluffy, evenly grained, beautifully raised and absolutely wholesome.

Then

Go to your dealer and demand a can of Calumet—be sure to get Calumet. Watch results. Compare them with the best bakings you ever turned out, seen or tasted. Then if you are not fully convinced that Calumet is better as well as more economical than the brand you are now using, your dealer will refund the full purchase price—25c. Calumet is used in millions of homes—recommended by the best chefs, cooks and domestic science teachers.

PURE FOOD LAWS

Not only has the public been benefited by the passage of Pure Food laws and regulations but the manufacturers of many lines have profited by the enormous increase in their business that has followed the setting of a standard below which they dare not let their product fall.

The makers of ice cream it is thought have profited to a greater extent than those of any other line; the publicity attending the passage of the laws specifying the percentage of nutriment that must be present before a product can be called ice cream has caused the consuming public to look upon ice cream as a valuable article of food instead of a confection and a luxury to be served only on state occasions.

Previous to the passage of these regulations it was not uncommon to read of entire families and communities that had been made sick and even killed by eating impure and poisonous ice cream. Now that the quality of the component parts of ice cream is specified by law and the sanitary condition of the plant in which it is manufactured guaranteed by law we find physicians prescribing it for the sick and its use among all classes has increased a thousand fold.

Ice cream as we know it today is not only a confection but a highly nutritious article of food suitable alike for every member of the family from the baby in arms to the grandfather.
